Dr. Nathalie Jugovic graduated from the University of Melbourne in 2000. At the start of her veterinary career Nathalie worked for a few small animal practices in England. She returned to Australia in 2004 and worked for several years at Pascoe Vale Veterinary Hospital. In 2007 she started working part-time in emergency medicine at the AEC Mt Waverley and also part time at Hobson's Bay Vet Clinic, where she still works today. Nathalie is passionate about acupuncture and she integrates it into her small animal caseload.

Nathalie is strongly committed and strives towards giving a very high level of care to her patients. She looks forward to the ongoing challenges of continuing education with special interests in emergency medicine and ultrasonography. Through a personal experience Nathalie's interest in Chinese medicine and acupuncture was ignited which lead to her undertaking the IVAS course. Nathalie completed the IVAS Acupuncture Certification course in 2013. This is Nathalie's first year as an online tutor for the Australian IVAS Acupuncture Certification Course. She is very much looking forward to providing support for her students and working with her group. She also looks forward to continuing to expand her own understanding of Chinese medicine.
