

Nancy L. Martin, MS, DVM, CVA

Dr. Martin obtained her B.S. in Animal Science in 1981 from Cal Poly San Luis Obispo in California. While completing a Master's Degree in Domestic Animal Behavior at UC Davis (1986) Dr. Martin managed the University's range beef research herd for four years. Dr. Martin went on to finish a DVM at UC Davis in 1991. She has practiced rural mixed animal medicine for 30 years in Northern California. Her practice has been integrative since receiving her Certification in Veterinary Acupuncture in 2008 with IVAS. Dr. Martin is considered a specialist in herd animal management and disease prevention, and in the promotion of antibiotic stewardship through the use of Traditional Chinese Herbal Medicinal Formulas. Dr. Martin currently studies the evolutionary biology of humans and domesticated species in order to better understand the effect of modern industrialized living styles on mental and physical health.
